PORT FREEPORT RECEIVES AAPA COMMUNICATIONS AWARD OF EXCELLENCE

Port Freeport was recently honored with an Award of Excellence in the American Association of Port Authorities (AAPA) 2019 Communications Awards Program for their entry in the Overall Campaign category. The Port's entry highlighted the 2018 Port Freeport Bond Package Informational Campaign.

The Communications Program awards member ports for their strategic communications through peer-reviewed analyses of programs and projects and by showcasing best practices and lessons learned. The 2019 AAPA Communications Awards Program relied on 32 professional public relations practitioners from the Washington, D.C. area who cumulatively spent 128 hours over two weeks judging the entries. This year, the program received a total of 79 entries.

“It's an honor for Port Freeport to be recognized by its peers in communication on a national platform. The Public Affairs team works with Port Commission and staff to keep the Port's key audiences informed of progress toward our strategic initiatives,” said Phyllis Saathoff, Port Freeport Executive Director/CEO. “The success of the Bond Package Informational Campaign plays a significant role in the advancement of the initiative to deepen and widen the Freeport Harbor Channel.”

Port Freeport's entry highlighted the comprehensive campaign used to fully inform the community of the 2018 bond package and the Freeport Harbor Channel Improvement Project. “On behalf of the Port Commissioners, I would like to congratulate the Public Affairs team for winning this award. The ongoing communications efforts and shared vision between the Port, its partners and the community resulted in the passage of the bond issue. The Port can move forward with the Channel Project and create a legacy of continued economic opportunity and prosperity for the region to support future generations,” said Port Freeport Chairman Shane Pirtle.

MEGlobal “BookraMEG” Oyster Creek Project named Best Project Winner – Texas and Louisiana - by Engineering News-Record

The EQUATE Group is proud to announce that the MEGlobal BookraMEG Oyster Creek Project has been named the 2020 Best Project in the Industrial/Energy category by ENR Texas & Louisiana. The project - nicknamed “BookraMEG” (meaning “future MEG”) - is a world-scale 750,000 metric-ton-per-annum monoethylene (MEG) glycol and di-ethylene glycol facility (DEG) built in Oyster Creek, TX as part of EQUATE's subsidiary, MEGlobal. In addition to being completed ahead of schedule, below budget and with an excellent safety record, it was the first time the EQUATE Group constructed a new EG facility in the United States.

“During a period when there was an extraordinary number of construction projects in the US Gulf Coast, MEGlobal was able to capitalize on the expertise of its shareholders and the collaboration of its contract partners,” said Dr. Ramesh Ramachandran, CEO of EQUATE. “Dow's world class engineering and procurement support coupled with the active participation of the global engineering work force of EQUATE enabled us to select the best work practices across the world. We will forever be grateful to this project team that delivered a world scale plant safely and ahead of schedule.”

The project was co-submitted for award by MEGlobal, Worley (general contractor) and Fluor (construction contractor) and was one of 18 selected from more than 130 submissions.

“This was an outstanding project in every sense and we are incredibly proud to be recognized for the teamwork, safety commitment and operational excellence demonstrated by the entire organization,” said Clarence Stadlwieser, MEGlobal Project Director.

The project was judged on its safety, international teamwork, ability to overcome challenges, innovation, complexity, contribution to the industry/community, construction quality and craftsmanship, and functionality of design and aesthetic quality.

Jason Kraynek, Fluor's Senior Vice President – Energy & Chemicals, said safety was the first priority of the project.

“MEGlobal, Worley, and Fluor were fully aligned that safety was the overriding project objective and nothing would compromise this attitude. As other project contractors were brought on board, they were aligned with this objective and a key part of contractor selection was the contractor's past safety record. The entire project senior management team continuously emphasized focus on safety, both in design and execution of construction,” he said. As a result, the Total Recordable Incident Rate (TRIR) was TRIR of 0.054.

Stephen Hillier, Worley's President added, “It was no small feat, but working together, we were able to complete this world-scale facility eight months faster than the industry average. The success of the project is testament to the rigor and dedication of the team – always collaborating towards a common goal. Over the course of the project, we achieved continuous safe work, minimized rework and met project requirements. I'm grateful to MEGlobal for the trust they had in Worley and Fluor to partner with them and accelerate construction in a safe manner.”

The winners of ENR's National Best Project Awards will be celebrated at a ceremony in Houston on Oct. 23, 2020.

“Stronger Than Yesterday”

Physical therapy is often recommended as an essential element of patient care. By assisting patients manage pain and/or improve independence, physical therapists serve patients of all ages by providing evidence-based treatment with the goal of improving quality of life. Whether your problem is a result of an injury, or a disease process, physical therapy can help. We offer individualized treatment plans based on the needs of each patient. Physical therapy is often recommended in hopes of avoiding surgery. However, if surgery is indicated, physical rehabilitation is needed to optimize recovery post surgery. Falls and injuries resulting from a fall are responsible for robbing too many older Americans of their independence. Furthermore, fear of falling oftentimes leads to social isolation which further decreases quality of life. Your physical therapist will assess balance and safety with walking in order to design and implement a treatment regimen to get you back to a more active lifestyle. We work with each patient to determine their goals and work hard every day to help them be successful. Whether the patient is an elite athlete with hopes of getting back to competition or a grandparent who hopes to be able to go out more to spend time with friends and family, your physical therapist will guide you every step of the way.
